

Canal Rewatered Towpath Access Restored

(May 2009) Joggers, walkers and cyclists regained access to the full length of the Augusta Canal towpath as of 5 p.m. Friday, May 8, according to information supplied by the construction company performing work on the city waterworks raw water pumping station. Work will continue on the project, but safety fencing will allow pedestrians to pass by the work areas. The entry point accessed via Eisenhower Drive or Goodrich Street had been closed for several months. The bridge across the canal at Eisenhower Park remains closed.
